

To: The College Community

From: John R. Connors

Date: January 20, 2017

Re: Presidential search update

As I mentioned at yesterday's meeting of the College community, the Presidential Search Committee will meet next on Monday, January 30. During that session, the group will select approximately ten to twelve candidates for the next round of consideration, in the form of a meeting for each candidate with the committee, via Skype, for about an hour. These interviews will occur early in February.

A number of candidates have submitted their materials, which members of the committee are in the process of reviewing. A number of other potential candidates have been in touch with Dr. Chuck Taylor of Diversified Search to discuss their interest before determining if they should actually apply. He expects that a significant number of them, as well as others, will indeed complete the application process before our January 30 meeting. At this point, everything is proceeding according to schedule.

As always, I will keep you informed as the process moves forward.